Loading built-in data

The various R packages contain a number of existing datasets that are easy to load. The main command used to access these datasets is data:

```
data()             # Brings up list of all available datasets, grouped by package data(counties)     # Loads the dataset named counties help(counties)     # We can find information about the dataset before or after loading
```